Introduction

Emerging market (EM) credit defied the global credit market slump in April, continuing its upward trajectory from Q1 2024.

The turnaround, following an April sell-off mirroring global credit markets, stemmed from a dovish shift in sentiment as the inflationary environment in the United States saw a turning point, with April's consumer price index increasing less than expected and positive updates from emerging economies. China's government announced measures to support its struggling housing sector, which boosted confidence. In India, optimism rose due to the expected re-election of Prime Minister Modi, although the possibility of a coalition government added some uncertainty.

From a performance standpoint, EM corporate credit delivered a 1.98% return, outperforming the 1.57% return seen in developed markets.

Market Environment and Performance

China's macroeconomy continued to exhibit signs of a recovery in May. Leading indicators, notably the General Composite PMI (54.1 v a previous month reading of 52.8) pointed to the highest reading since May 2023, a seventh straight month of growth in private sector activity as output growth accelerated in both manufacturing and service sectors. On the back of such upbeat figures, inflation figures, albeit marginally below estimates, proved upbeat. In May, consumer prices edged up 0.3% YoY in May 2024, unchanged from April's reading, amid an ongoing recovery in domestic demand.

Despite nascent signs of improvement, structural challenges continue to persist. Recent government interventions, particularly in the property sector, offer hope, but their long-term effectiveness remains to be seen. Still, sustained stability in property prices is indeed anticipated. This is viewed as a crucial precursor to a turnaround in the sector. Stabilized home prices shall indeed have positive ripple effects, potentially improving consumer sentiment and ultimately enhancing China's growth outlook.

India's economic performance exhibited continued expansion, most recent figures showed. The services sector, a crucial engine of the economy, remained robust, although growth slowed slightly compared to April. Meanwhile, manufacturing signalled a slower but still substantial improvement in the country's manufacturing sector, amid a softer rise in new orders and output. Looking ahead, manufacturers expressed the highest level of positive sentiment towards growth prospects in nearly nine-and-a-half years, buoyed by advertising and innovation, alongside expectations that economic and demand conditions will remain favourable.

Latin America presented a nuanced economic picture in May, with a broader slowdown emerging compared to the earlier part of Q1. Brazil, the region's powerhouse, exhibited continued resilience, with activity - aided by the services segment - revolving in expansionary territory. Inflation, meanwhile, picked up from the 3.69% jump in the prior month, and above market expectations of 3.89% to mark the first acceleration in Brazilian consumer prices since September of 2023. Mexico, still in expansion, saw a marginal growth in manufacturing as new orders continued to rise. From a policy perspective, Chile – among the first to ease policy – carried out a 50bps cut, which brings them to 6.0%. Brazil too lowered its key Selic rate by 25bps to 10.5%, in line with expectations.

Fund Performance

In May, the CC Emerging Market Bond Fund realized a gain of 1.58%. Throughout the month, the Manager largely maintained its portfolio allocation, only adding the sovereign of Saudi Arabia to the fund's sovereign exposure. Indeed, the decisions previously taken to increase the fund's exposure to sovereigns and quasi-sovereigns, notably to Brazil and Mexico amongst other, remain valid and shall going forward pay dividends, particularly as the respective central bankers continue to gradually ease its yet restrictive macroeconomic policy.

Market and Investment Outlook

Looking ahead, the evolving global interest rate environment, particularly decisions by the Fed, will be crucial to monitor. A hawkish Fed stance may lead to a sustained period of higher rates globally, potentially translating into a stronger US dollar. A "higher-for-longer" dollar scenario indeed presents a challenge for EM economies, notably; reduced fund flows from foreign investors seeking higher returns elsewhere, and increased refinancing costs for companies with large foreign currency debt burdens.

With respect to the Emerging Market Bond Fund, the manager will continue to assess the market landscape and capitalize on appealing credit opportunities. Consistent with recent actions, the manager will continue to tailor the portfolio to match prevailing yield conditions while increasing the portfolio's overall duration. This whilst keeping a close eye on the political landscape within Emerging Markets and possible escalation of geopolitical tensions, which to-date have alas endured. Despite rate cut expectations falling over the year, optimism remains.
